COACHING STYLE

- What to expect? Conversations underpinned by deep listening, exploration, encouragement, challenge, energy, support, and candour, all without judgement or prejudice.
- Potential outcomes: heightened self-awareness; increased confidence; deeper knowledge of your strengths, common behavioural traits and 'blockages'; perspective shift; renewed energy; clarity of vision; increased focus; resilience; improved collaboration within teams; superior leadership skills.
- Recent examples of clients' objectives include:
 - Developing greater self-awareness to encourage authentic leadership thinking and behaviour
 - Strengthening a team identity, vision and 'narrative'
 - Recognising individual and collective strengths within a team and understanding how to apply them to enhance client satisfaction
 - Improving self-confidence to create higher impact with internal and external clients
 - Developing self-belief to execute a business strategy to move from paid employment in a corporate setting to founding a not-for-profit enterprise
 - Transitioning skills to take more personal responsibility (without asking permission) in a growing team environment

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

2003 – present, Highpoint Partners Limited, Owner/Director
1994 – 2003, Russell Reynolds Associates, Managing Director

- I work with individuals one-on-one, and with teams. From senior leaders, through emerging and aspiring leaders, those in career and role transition, and teams with complex, strategic challenges.
- In all client relationships I firstly seek to understand the organisation, its challenges, team dynamics, culture and values, then adapt to suit the individual's or team's needs in context. The client always retains accountability for their own learning.
- My pre-coaching and facilitation career spans over 20 years in Executive Search, predominantly working with global asset management firms and investment banks. Projects were completed in the UK, Europe, the USA and Japan, and included advising senior leaders on key hiring decisions and team building, as well as hundreds of hours of career coaching.
- I previously taught English at the University of Bordeaux, France.
